Continue Your Service, Propel Your Career

Lt. Gen. Jack C. Stultz, Chief of the Army Reserve, created the Employer Partnership Initiative for Soldiers and employers. As a former operations manager in corporate America, he knows America's employers need highly qualified, motivated workers. Thus,

Lt. Gen. Stultz built a mechanism for employers to gain access to some of America's finest employees—Army Reserve Soldiers. At the same time, Army Reserve Soldiers can have two meaningful careers—one with the Army Reserve and the other with an Employer Partner.

"As a military police officer in the Army Reserve, I received training and a foundation in law enforcement. The Army Reserve Employer Partnership Initiative means that I can use my Army Reserve training in law enforcement to enhance my career as a police officer."

Through the initiative, Soldiers can more effectively leverage their Army Reserve training and experience for career opportunities in today's civilian job market with national, regional and local Employer Partners.

"The Army Reserve serves our Nation and our Soldiers. I am proud to have launched the Employer Partnership Initiative to show my gratitude to our brave Warrior-Citizens and to thank them for their service. in the corporate sector, you can leverage your military training and real world expertise to further your success in your civilian career.

It is natural that Employer Partners look to the Army Reserve as a reliable source of high-quality employees. In fact, Lt. Gen. Stultz's vision is for corporate America to view the Army Reserve as the number one source of reliable, values-driven, trained talent.

Get an Edge

You can gain a competitive advantage over other job hunters. Employer Partners know that Army Reserve Soldiers come to them after having undergone rigorous training and challenging experiences. In addition, depending on your military training, you may have applicable credentialing and licensing that might allow you to immediately begin work. Since the leadership abilities and team-building skills you've honed in the military are hard to replicate in the civilian world, you'll enjoy another advantage over other job seekers who may not get the same continual professional development opportunities as you.
